CNCC CODE OF CONDUCT – RACIAL, RELIGIOUS & OTHER FORMS OF VILIFICATION CODE

This Code of Conduct establishes the minimum conduct required of all members of the Claremont Nedlands Cricket Club. Compliance with the Code is a condition of involvement at the club at any level, whether it be in senior or junior cricket and applies to all members at training, competition, travel, social functions, online activity and any other setting involving members of the club.

The underlying principle associated with the establishment of this code is the safety, welfare and dignity of members, those with whom we compete, those who officiate or any other person with whom a member of the club has interaction whilst representing the club.

The Code embodies the spirit of cricket which is a concept embodying the principles of sportsmanship, fair play, and mutual respect that are considered fundamental to the game. They further embody concepts of basic decency, the respect that should always be shown to others regardless of their race, religion, sexual orientation, culture, ethic descent, national or ethnic origin, sex, gender, disability and marital status.

The members of the club make the following undertakings:

- That we will treat each other, opponents, officials, spectators and all those with whom we come in contact as representatives of the club with dignity, humility and respect.
- That we will not abuse, bully, harass, discriminate, vilify, intimidate, humiliate, threaten, exploit or victimise any person either by words or conduct.

Each member of the club understands that there will be consequences for transgressing the basic requirements of this Code, which include but are not limited to:

- Engaging in education.
- Written warning.
- Restriction or exclusion from an event or ground entry.
- Mediation.
- Removal from an event (either playing or social).
- Suspension.
- Deregistration.
